Dear Journalist,

I am pleased to announce the 29th Annual Gerald R. Ford Journalism Prizes, a competition for distinguished reporting in 2015.

DISTINGUISHED REPORTING
ON THE PRESIDENCY

DISTINGUISHED REPORTING
NATIONAL DEFENSE

In 1988, the Gerald R. Ford Presidential Foundation established the Journalism Prize Competition. With this annual award, President Ford wanted to recognize and encourage thoughtful, insightful, and enterprising work by journalists covering the presidency and national defense. The Foundation is proud to continue this tradition. Again this year, the Foundation will award two $5,000 prizes, one for distinguished achievement in reporting on the presidency and another on national defense during the calendar year 2015. The awards will be presented in June 2016.

We are proud of our list of winners and look forward to receiving this year's entries. In 2010, we began awarding Honorable Mention recognitions. Please see the attachment for the nomination process, deadline, and selection of winner's criteria. Submissions from online and broadcast journalists welcome.

Please feel free to contact us with any questions at press@38foundation.org or 616-254-0393. Information is also available on our website: www.geraldrfordfoundation.org.

Sincerely,

Joe Calvaruso

Gerald R. Ford Presidential Foundation 29th Annual Journalism Prize Competition

NOMINATIONS

- Entries must be for work as published in print, presented online, or broadcast (must have a transcript) during 2015 by a media outlet based in the United States or its territories.
- Journalists may apply directly, or they may be nominated by others. In the case of a nomination by a second party, the candidates may be contacted and invited to submit the materials described below to complete the application.
- A journalist may apply (or be nominated) jointly with another journalist for articles jointly published. Articles must be submitted on behalf of a journalist(s) and not an organization.
- A journalist can apply (or be nominated) only once for one of the two prizes each year.

DEADLINE

Applications must be received by Friday, March 18, 2016. All properly completed application packets received by this date will be forwarded to a panel of judges for consideration.

MATERIAL SUBMISSION

There is no application form. Each candidate for an award must submit eight sets of the following:

- Must include minimum of four, but not more than five articles. If a series of articles is submitted, each article in the series is considered toward the maximum of five that can be submitted.
- A letter of nomination from the candidate's publisher, editor or bureau chief, or in the case of an independent or freelance journalist, from someone who is familiar with his or her work. Since the prizes will recognize reportorial excellence, the letter of nomination must describe in detail the candidate's accomplishments, skills as a reporter, the larger body of journalistic work during 2015 and explain the degree to which the portfolio samples have been edited or revised by others.
- A brief biographical sketch identifying the candidate's journalistic experience and training. Include the candidate's address, phone number, and e-mail address.
- A portfolio, no larger than 9" x 15", of his or her best reporting during 2015 on either the presidency or national defense.
- The portfolio may include legible photocopies, rather than original clippings. On-line journalist entries, which may be submitted, must be in the form of web-page printouts and other original materials. Broadcast entries must have a transcript with material submission via live URL or DVD.

NOTE: On-Line Material Submission:

For on-line material submission please contact contest coordinator for instructions.

SELECTION OF WINNERS

Each prize will be determined by a separate panel of judges. Typically, judges are selected from journalism and academia or have experience in the executive branch or national defense matters.

CRITERIA

Judging will be based upon the journalist's ability to foster better public understanding of either the United States presidency or national defense. The prizes recognize reportorial excellence as reflected by resourcefulness, insight, quality of writing and brevity, rather than the quality of editorial comment. Candidates for either prize should have compiled a year-long record of consistent, judicious, sensitive and noteworthy coverage. The prizes recognize the quality of a journalist's work during the year, rather than any single article.

Work may have appeared in print at a local, regional, national or international level (daily newspapers, news magazines or trade publications with a broad readership). Freelance as well as staff journalists may be candidates.

For the Presidency Prize, reporting should address ways in which the President sets policy and makes decisions, how the President initiates programs and responds to events, how the President relies on Cabinet and senior staff, and the structure and functioning of White House operations.

For the Defense Prize, reporting should address Department of Defense operations, military operations, unconventional threats and targets, defense resource management, military preparedness, international arms control, or other national security issues.
